Art Unit: 3635

Claims 1-16 are objected to for the following reasons: It is unclear if applicant is claiming just the anchor or the combination anchor and frame. The preamble states "an anchor for mating to a channel....." The frame is introduced as secondary, used to explain the channels. The preamble goes on to state "the anchor thereinbetween comprising:.....". The body of the claims part a) recites a pair of notches; the notches are a part of the frame and not the anchor as the claim as the claim implies.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 9-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reichert (6425221) in view of McCandless (6289641). Reichert discloses an anchor 50 for mating to a channel, the channel is formed between a pair of spaced apart frame members 22; see figure 9. The frame members 22 each have a top surface with a flange and a pair of opposing flanges which receiver the anchor 50. The frame includes a notch 56 formed in each flange. The size of the notches in comparison to the flanges has been considered a matter of choice lacking criticality; one of ordinary skill in the art would have appreciated making the notches of any size that would provide a suitable fit with the anchor/clip.

The anchor comprises:

- a clip 58 sized to fit between the channels. The clip includes a base with upper and lower sides, opposing ends and sides (square configuration). The clip attaches to the first and second flanges. See figures 4,7 and 9 and accompanying text.
- A pair of downwardly extending outside rails 54 disposed on the lower side of the base; the pair of outside rails are spaced apart and are disposed adjacent the sides of the base
- The pair of outside rails each having first and second opposing ends and a top surface; a transverse slot is formed in each of the first and second ends of the outside rail; the transverse slot is between the top of the outside of the rail and lower side of the base; see figure 13; one end of each of the flanges is disposed in one of the transverse slots of each said end of said outside rails wherein the clip is secured between the pair of channels;
- A post 52 disposed on the upper side of the base; the post is perpendicular to the base; the post includes opposing sides oriented toward opposite sides of the base; a plurality of arms are disposed in a spaced apart relationship to the post; the arms extend laterally away from the post toward opposing sides of post so that object can be mounted to the post;
- There are four arms which extend from the post generally parallel to the channel.

Reichert lacks the center disposed between the pair of outside rails as shown by McCandless; See figure 2, element 117 and 93. ~~It~~ would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify Reichert to include the center rail to strengthen the attachment between the anchor and the frame. For Reichert and McCandless, the outside rails and the center rail are substantially perpendicular to the flanges.

Regarding Reichert, the outside rails are complementary to the channels.

Regarding the material for construction for the anchor; One of ordinary skill in the art of muntin bar anchors would have appreciated any material of construction enabling the anchors intended function.

Claims 1-8 are objected in view of the objection above but would be allowable if amended.

Claim 16 is objected to as depending upon a rejected base claim but would be allowable if amended to include the limitations of the independent claim and any intervening claims.
